Benefits of Music Education

Last year, the Texas Music Educators Association conducted an analysis of student enrollment in Texas middle school and high school fine arts courses (music, theatre, art, and dance). The analysis found that student enrollment in fine arts courses was 36 percent higher in schools rated “exemplary” than in schools rated “low performing.” Also, schools with higher student involvement in fine arts had better student attendance records. In addition, students selected as Texas All-State musicians have SAT scores over 300 points higher than the state average and over 200 points higher than the national average.

1. Do you believe that learning music helps improve student performance in other academic courses?

Education Priorities

Many believe that being in a school band, orchestra, or choir is an extracurricular activity, yet these are standards-based academic courses for which students receive course credits. State law requires every high school student to have at least one fine arts credit to graduate. However, student enrollment in high school and middle school music courses has been steadily declining for the past 10 years and, in elementary grades, music education is often sacrificed to prepare for TAKS tests.

5. Do you support or oppose making fine arts courses part of the core curriculum for Texas schools?

Opportunities to Study Fine Arts

When the legislature creates new requirements for courses that must be taken or for what must be taught, the unintended consequence is often limited opportunities for students to study music and other fine arts. Two recent examples are legislation mandating more time for physical activity in middle schools and legislation mandating four math credits and four science credits in high school.

8. Do you favor or oppose further expansion of physical activity time requirements in Texas schools?
 Favor more Oppose Undecided Would like more info
9. If the legislature increases the physical activity requirement, would you favor or oppose mandating that schools increase the length of their instruction day (which would require additional state or local funding)?
 Favor longer day Oppose Undecided Would like more info
10. Would you support or oppose the creation of courses that would integrate fine arts with math and fine arts with science to fulfill one of the four required high school math credits or science credits?
